

To Genealogical/Historical Organizations and Sites,

On Friday, September 3, 2021, and Saturday, September 4, 2021, the Jonesborough Genealogical Society will host the second annual Washington County Heritage Fair at the Jonesborough Visitors Center, 117 Boone Street, Jonesborough. This event will begin at 9 am and last until the last child is gone. The Heritage Fair is away for the society to bring educational experiences and awareness to the next generation through expression and presentation of local history and genealogy. The Heritage Fair, also, is an outgrowth of our mission: “to promote, study, preserve, and document the family heritages of Jonesborough, Washington County, and Northeast Tennessee.” In addition, the society has set many goals in our 15-year plan. One of these goals is to increase youth participation through the possibility of scholarships, programming, and working with local history teachers. The Heritage Fair does many of these factors. It provides students with a way to express themselves through creativity and research as well as increase research skills, reading skills, communication skills, and presentation skills as well as provide them a chance to grasp onto, or at least, see history played out in their own family heritages in their community and region.

Yet, the society also wants to open this event to genealogical and historical organizations to have an opportunity to share their historical/genealogical knowledge with the next generation. In this effort, we ask our fellow genealogical and historical organizations and sites, as well as individuals, who wish to host a booth at the Washington County Heritage Fair to sign up. Booths should have some form of poster presentation related to a historical/genealogical topics and can have info related to your organization and site. We are encouraging to focus on specific areas of history that can help educate the next generation. For example, if you are a DAR chapter, you might want to create a display on Revolutionary War Soldiers your organization has marker, or soldiers you want more info on.

This event will be a fun time for all students, principals, teachers, and the community to gather in the county seat and oldest town, Jonesborough, to learn from our students about their perspectives of local and regional heritage through their own research, creativity, and documentation. We hope your school will join us, and fill out the attached form, so we can get a county of how many schools will be participating, as well as continue preparation for the event.

Thanks,

Chad Fred Bailey, President
